

United Nations
Competencies

for the Future

“It is my hope that competencies will provide us with shared language for talking, in concrete terms, about high performance and managerial excellence. I believe that a shared view of the standards we are striving to achieve will assist us in our continuing efforts to prepare the Organization to meet the challenges of the 21st century.”

Kofi Annan
Secretary-General

Introduction to Competencies

In “Building the Future”, the Secretary-General has indicated that the Organization’s greatest strength—and the key to our success—is the quality of our staff and managers. He has stressed that, to capitalize on this strength, we need to create an organizational culture and environment that enables staff to contribute to their maximum potential. Experience in other organizations has shown that when seeking to create a new culture and build human resources capacity for the future, it is important to define organizational core competencies—the combination of skills, attributes and behaviours which are essential for all staff—as well as the additional managerial competencies required by all those who manage others. Once organizational competencies have been defined, they can be used as a base on which to build and strengthen other human resources systems such as recruitment, placement, development and performance appraisal.

Accordingly, a participatory process, involving staff and managers throughout the Secretariat, was undertaken to define core and managerial competencies for the United Nations Secretariat. This booklet has been prepared to inform staff of the United Nations competencies for the future, to describe how these competencies were arrived at, to provide examples of how the competencies look in action and to indicate how they will be applied in the Secretariat.

What are competencies?

The term “competency” refers to a combination of skills, attributes and behaviours that are directly related to successful performance on the job.

Core competencies are the skills, attributes and behaviours which are considered important for all staff of the Organization, regardless of their function or level.

Managerial competencies are the skills, attributes and behaviours which are considered essential for staff with managerial or supervisory responsibilities.

Core and managerial competencies are not specific to any occupation. One could demonstrate the competency of “teamwork” or “client orientation”, for example, in performing any job. Specific technical competencies are not included in the model of United Nations competencies for the future. To complement the core competencies, individual departments may choose to define functional competencies related to their respective areas of work.

Why are competencies important ?

Defining competencies is important both for the Organization and for staff. Competencies are forward-looking. They describe the skills and attributes staff and managers will need in order to build a new organizational culture and meet future challenges. They help organizations clarify expectations, define future development needs, and do more focused recruitment and development planning. Competencies provide a sound basis for consistent and objective performance standards by creating shared language about what is needed and expected in an Organization.

How were the United Nations competencies decided?

Core and managerial competencies for the United Nations Secretariat have been developed through a participatory process taking into account the diversity of levels, functions, cultures and geographic locations of the Organization.

Interviews

As part of the process, interviews were conducted with the Deputy Secretary-General and twenty-four Under-Secretaries-General and Assistant Secretaries-General who head Departments and Offices throughout the Secretariat. They were asked about the Organization's environment, stakeholders, work outputs and future challenges. Information drawn from the interviews provided an overall context for the work of focus groups.

Focus Groups

Seventeen focus groups, comprising a cross section of staff from different departments at all levels, were held in six duty stations. The focus groups participated in a day-long process of examining the Organization's environment, the work we do and expect to do in the future, and the needs of our clients and stakeholders. Each group came to a consensus on the most important competencies and values for all international civil servants, as well as the additional competencies required by staff who manage others.

Building the Competency Model

The competencies defined by all groups were sorted and analysed. Similar competencies were grouped together and a common term chosen for each grouping. Using the most frequently occurring items, a model was developed with eight core competencies and six managerial competencies.

Organizational Core Values

Organizational values are the shared principles and beliefs that underpin the work of an organization and guide the actions and behaviours of its staff. During the participatory process, "integrity", "respect for diversity" and "professionalism" emerged as the Organization's core values, and they have been included in the model. They are consonant with the United Nations Charter and with the core values set out in Article I of the Staff Regulations.

How will the competencies be used?

Staff Development

Staff development programmes will be aligned with the competencies and new programmes introduced to support their development. A guide will be prepared explaining the various means available to acquire and strengthen competencies.

Career Planning

Competencies will increasingly be used as a basis for identifying individual and organizational needs and planning for development. Support will be provided to staff through publications and career support workshops.

Performance Management

Competencies will be useful to staff and managers in assessing development needs and setting performance standards. Competencies will be incorporated in subsequent revision of the PAS.

Recruitment

Gradually, competencies will be incorporated into generic job descriptions and vacancy announcements. Interview frameworks and other tools will be developed to incorporate competencies into recruitment and placement decisions, and staff will be trained in the use of these tools.

How do I acquire the competencies?

Competencies include a combination of skills, attributes and behaviours that need to be developed and strengthened throughout one's career. Acquiring a competency is not a one-time event, but rather an ongoing process. Formal training can help, but experience, coaching, feedback and individual learning activities are needed as well. To assist staff in using competencies in their daily work and planning for their continuous learning and development, ongoing information and guidance will be provided by OHRM.

What are the UN core values and competencies?

Core Values

- Accountability ■ Creativity ■ Client Orientation
- Commitment to Continuous Learning
- Technological Awareness

Managerial Competencies

- Leadership ■ Vision ■ Empowering Others
- Building Trust ■ Managing Performance
- Judgement/Decision-making

What do competencies look like in practice?

As competencies relate more to what a person does, than what a person knows, they are observable. For each competency it is possible to describe “behavioural indicators” – actions or behaviours that exemplify the competency in practice. These may be helpful in promoting shared values and common standards of performance and behaviour throughout the Organization.

The following pages set out the organizational core values, core competencies and managerial competencies, followed by “behavioural indicators”. These indicators are indicative only. They are not intended to describe all the behaviours related to a competency.

Integrity

- Demonstrates the values of the United Nations in daily activities and behaviours
- Acts without consideration of personal gain
- Resists undue political pressure in decision-making
- Does not abuse power or authority
- Stands by decisions that are in the Organization's interest, even if they are unpopular
- Takes prompt action in cases of unprofessional or unethical behaviour

Professionalism

The image features a bright yellow background. A vertical green bar runs along the right edge. A black horizontal bar is positioned across the middle, containing the word "Professionalism" in a white, sans-serif font. Above the black bar, there is a green horizontal bar. Below the black bar, there is a yellow downward-pointing triangle on the right side.

- Shows pride in work and in achievements
- Demonstrates professional competence and mastery of subject matter
- Is conscientious and efficient in meeting commitments, observing deadlines and achieving results

- Encourages risk-taking and supports creativity and initiative
- Actively supports the development and career aspirations of staff
- Appraises performance fairly

Building Trust

- Provides an environment in which others can talk and act without fear of repercussion
- Manages in a deliberate and predictable way
- Operates with transparency; has no hidden agenda
- Places confidence in colleagues, staff members and clients
- Gives proper credit to others
- Follows through on agreed upon actions
- Treats sensitive or confidential information appropriately

Judgement / Decision-making

- Identifies the key issues in a complex situation, and comes to the heart of the problem quickly
- Gathers relevant information before making a decision
- Considers positive and negative impacts of decisions prior to making them
- Takes decisions with an eye to the impact on others and on the Organization
- Proposes a course of action or makes a recommendation based on all available information
- Checks assumptions against facts
- Determines that the actions proposed will satisfy the expressed and underlying needs for the decision
- Makes tough decisions when necessary

What's Next?

Integrating competencies into the Organization is an ongoing process. As a first step, please use this booklet to familiarise yourself with the organizational values and competencies. Use and observe the competencies in your daily work and in discussing staff development and performance management issues. The booklet will be supplemented by additional publications to assist staff and managers in using and strengthening competencies to enhance performance, increase accountability at all levels, and promote continuous development.
